

EDUCATION

Is going to school education? I believe NO. Education is an act of unbiased learning. People tend to get into school and colleges yet remain rigid of what they believe. Can we call them educated? Education is having a mindset which depends on logics and statics and not a personal belief which is self-empowering for you. Education is improvement. Education is the act of acknowledging the accepting the reality. You may be born somewhere that does not make you; your education does. Education is experience: self or others. If you are a PhD or a post doc but you neglect the reality, I don't accept you as being educated. You might have never been to school but are unbiased and decide an opinion by analyzing the situation fairly. I see you as educated. If you belong to a particular religion, region, caste, place and support someone just because he also belongs to one of the above you are not educated. Unbiasedness is education. If your beliefs are a product of life experiences and not because you were fed into them by birth you are educated. Change is education, Analyzing is education, Acceptance of the unconventionality is education, respecting the differences is education. Practicing prejudice is not education. Education is not a degree but a journey. It's the outlook by which you look at things and how your experience has changes it. Education is observation So think are you a scholar?
